1. There are five repair shops for the Rumanian Navy at Sulina, together with a command building, a quarters building, a drydock, an assembly hall, an open air assembly area and several magazines.
2. The place is served by 230 or 235 men. These include a command group of 22 to 24, ten supply personnel, a staff platoon, 30 men, a guard group of 25 men, two assembly groups of 40 and 35 men, and a technical training group of 75. Most of them are anti-Communists.
3. The repair shops have very good and modern technical equipment. The men in the training group are all Rumanians, none of the minority groups being admitted. Most of them already have some experience on ships or in shipbuilding. Before taking up technical training they get a short two-week infantry course and political training, during which they continue to take two hours of military training daily.
4. No warships are stationed at Sulina.
5. A section of the Rumanian coast guard is also stationed at Sulina.
